Caregivers at a Glance

40 million people in the U.S. are caregivers to families, friends and neighbors.

1 in 6 Americans work while caring for an elderly or disabled family member.

Caregiving may cause health conditions, including depression, anxiety and other chronic illnesses.

Caregivers spend 6 days per month on average providing assistance with activities of daily living.

Self-Care 101

Practicing self-care is essential when caring for another person.

Get at least 7-8 hours of sleep. The more rest you have, the better you can care for yourself and others.

Incorporate a healthy, well-balanced diet that includes fruits and vegetable as well as eight glasses of water daily.

Stay active with regular exercise, which promotes endurance, balance, strength, flexibility and good health.

Seek necessary support from friends, family members and professionals when needed.

Creating a Safe Environment

Consider bed rails to prevent falls and injuries when repositioning someone or changing linens.

Use a monitor to listen for movements, which may help in responding quickly if necessary.

Keep a box near the bed with personal belongings, clothes or products for easy changes and access.

Use a bed alarm or timer to set scheduled alerts when it is time to wake, get up and engage in other activities.

Bedding Protection
